SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

The Confidential U.S. State Department Special Files for Southeast Asia contain a wealth of information concerning the diplomatic relationship between the United States and multiple Southeast Asian countries. The collection focuses primarily on the financial assistance provided by the United States to these countries. Interspersed with the reports on foreign assistance projects are discussions of the internal political situation of each country. This collection offers significant details of the diplomatic relations between the United States and other countries.

The papers contained in the Special Files for Southeast Asia are separated into country-specific folders. At this time in history, the primary mission of the United States diplomatic corps was to stem the advance of communism. In many regions, this mission took the form of providing financial and humanitarian assistance to less developed countries. Beginning with the files concerning Burma and Thailand, this collection contains background information for each country. The documents are organized into very specific folders, in some cases only a few pages long. This detailed organization allows the researcher to quickly find pertinent documents.

The United States provided multiple forms of assistance during this period. Among the most common was assistance provided under Public Law 480, also known as the Food for Peace Act. This law provides for the use of U.S. agricultural products to assist less developed countries. In addition to the P.L. 480 assistance, the United States often provided assistance through the Mutual Security Act. This act, an extension of the Marshall Plan, provided foreign assistance to countries in the interest of combating communism. In many cases, the United States did not provide direct aid to the recipient country; instead, through the Export-Import Bank, it guaranteed investment risk undertaken by U.S. companies in foreign nations.

The documents in this collection are not always terse discussions of foreign policy. In response to a request from the Malaysian Commercial Attaché, for example, the State Department devised a way to acquire two flamingos for the newly opened National Zoo in Kuala Lumpur. While the acquisition of the flamingos proved simple, a few pages of discussion are found relating to the logistics of transporting two flamingos from Dade County Florida to Malaysia (Reel 22, Frame 534).

While the collection contains a few humorous moments, the majority of documents chronicle the development and implementation of U.S. foreign policy. Beginning on Reel 4 are documents relating to the Griffin Mission. The Griffin Mission was a survey by R. Allen Griffin to explore the impact of the economic and technical needs of Southeast Asia. In 1950, Griffin traveled to Cambodia, Laos, and Vietnam to assess the need for foreign assistance. As a direct result of this mission, the United States authorized combined economic and military assistance of sixty million dollars.

While these documents contain a large quantity of information concerning the diplomatic activities of the United States, they are not an exhaustive collection. This collection does, however, provide not only a massive amount of information but also very specific details of the diplomatic interaction between the United States and Southeast Asian countries. By supplementing the information in this collection with documents from other UPA collections, the researcher can have a much more detailed understanding of the background and events in Southeast Asia.

Other collections of interest from UPA include British Documents on Foreign Affairs, Asia; Reports and Papers from the Foreign Office Confidential Print; CIA Research Reports; Confidential State Department Central Files; and National Security Files.

LexisNexis made its selection of which files to microfilm after an extensive search of archival indexes for records relating to Southeast Asia and U.S. policy from 1945 through 1966. These records were microfilmed in their original archival order as filed by the State Department. While most of the documents within each folder are filmed in reverse chronological order, some are filmed in chronological sequence.

PRINCIPAL CORRESPONDENTS INDEX

The following index is a guide to the principal correspondents in this microform publication. The first number after each entry refers to the reel, while the four-digit number following the colon refers to the frame number at which the file containing document(s) by the correspondent on the subject begins. Hence, 23: 0115 directs researchers to Frame 0115 of Reel 23. By referring to the Reel Index, which constitutes the initial segment of this guide, the researcher will find the folder title, inclusive dates, and a list of Major Topics and Principal Correspondents, listed in the order in which they appear on the film. Southeast Asian names begin with the surname and are followed by the personal name. In this index, these names are indexed according to the surname. In some cases, the surname has been abbreviated. These abbreviated surnames have been placed at the end of the index.

SUBJECT INDEX

The following index is a guide to the major topics in this microform publication. The first number after each entry refers to the reel, while the four-digit number following the colon refers to the frame number at which the file containing information on the subject begins. Hence, 22: 0527 directs researchers to Frame 0527 of Reel 22. By referring to the Reel Index, which constitutes the initial segment of this guide, the researcher will find topics listed in the order in which they appear on the film.

THE SPECIAL STUDIES SERIES

Vietnam and Southeast Asia, 1960–1980

The examination of American foreign relations has always been a significant area of research for historians and political scientists. Even as those disciplines begin to move beyond their traditional focus on politics and parliaments into realms of American cultural and economic foreign policy, the records of the State Department remain a major source of information for scholars. The State Department Office (Lot) Files—UPA’s Special Files series—play an increasingly important role in this research. The Confidential U.S. State Department Special Files: Southeast Asia, First Supplement, 1947–1966 provides a wealth of detailed primary information.

Essentially a collection of “working files” from wide-ranging State Department offices, these State Department Office (Lot) Files—or UPA’s Special Files—concentrate on defined geographic areas and yield insight into the day-to-day workings of particular offices and individuals; address topics of concern to a specific nation, such as public affairs and culture, economics, intelligence, or national security; and reveal the progress of policy formulation. Beyond providing rare insight into policy formulation and events in particular countries or regions, these Special Files contain unique documents not found in the State Department Central Files.

The documents in this collection are not always terse discussions of foreign policy. In response to a request from the Malaysian Commercial Attaché, for example, the State Department devised a way to acquire two flamingos for the newly opened National Zoo in Kuala Lumpur. While the acquisition of the flamingos proved simple, a few pages of discussion are found relating to the logistics of transporting two flamingos from Dade County Florida to Malaysia

UPA’s new collection covers all aspects of Southeast Asian internal and external affairs and relations between Burma, Indonesia, Malaysia and Singapore, Thailand, and U.S economic and mutual defense aid missions to Southeast Asia. In inter- and intradepartmental memoranda, memoranda of conversations, position papers, minutes of meetings, operations memoranda, copies of U.S. Army and Air Force telegrams, and “official-informal” correspondence between the State Department and Foreign Service officials, scholars will find information on such topics as U. S. military, political, and economic aid; independence movements; Kuomintang troops in Burma; U.S. congressional visits; cultural exchange programs; general economic conditions; military affairs; UN matters; investment; health and education; defense; strategic trade controls; and economic development plans.
