SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

Japan's resurrection following World War II is one of the greatest stories of the twentieth century. After a brief period under U.S. occupation and armed with a new pacifist constitution, Japan embarked in the 1950s on a phenomenal period of economic growth that lasted nearly four decades. This collection, which covers the period 1967–1969, witnesses a Japan flush with economic and political power but still chafing under the military dominance of the United States. The documents come from the U.S. State Department Central Files, which are the definitive source of American diplomatic reporting on political, military, social, and economic developments throughout the world in the twentieth century. The files are arranged according to the State Department Records Classification System, February 1963–1973, and this edition focuses on documents from the AID (Economic Assistance), CSM (Communism), DEF (Defense Affairs), and POL (Political Affairs and Relations) categories. The files are derived from a wide array of sources, including cables sent and received by diplomatic personnel; reports of meetings between U.S. and foreign government officials; newspaper summaries and clippings; descriptions of routine legislative proceedings; speeches and correspondence; and miscellaneous reports on an assortment of political, social, and economic affairs. Information on these and other topics can be found by consulting the Subject Index at the back of the guide, or by browsing through the Reel Index.

As the 1960s drew to a close, Japan was riding high on a wave of spectacular economic growth that averaged 10 percent a year. As the AID documents in Reel 1 demonstrate, this burgeoning economic strength enabled Japan to become a significant contributor of economic aid and assistance, especially in developing countries. Along with this economic strength came political strength: Reels 6, 7, 11, and 14 document the activities of Japanese diplomats and politicians throughout the world, with a heavy focus on the former holdings of the Japanese Empire in east and southeast Asia. Despite lingering resentments, particularly in China and Korea, the ties that bound industrial Japan to its neighbors retained their force.

The Japanese government was dominated in the postwar decades by the Liberal Democratic Party (LDP), which was opposed by a broad but weak range of groups, including the Japanese Communist Party (JCP), Japanese Socialist Party (JSP), Democratic Socialist Party (DSP), and Komeito (Clean Government Political Assembly). Even when banded together these leftist parties were no match for the LDP, but their increasing clout in the late 1960s was a reflection of growing political frictions within Japan. Elections for the National Diet occurred on a yearly basis during these years, with the LDP maintaining its position as the majority party. Although Emperor Hirohito (reigned 1926–1989) retained a position of prestige, the country was governed by Prime Minister Eisaku Sato, who was in power from 1964 to 1972. Although he believed in the necessity of maintaining strong ties with the United States, he was quick to defend Japan's right to follow an independent policy in both domestic and international affairs.

Other prominent LDP figures featured in this collection include Takeo Miki, the foreign minister, and his successor Kiichi Aichi.

Although postwar Japan hewed firmly to the principle of pacifism, it nevertheless pursued an aggressive policy of defensive rearmament, with full U.S. support. While the LDP strongly favored a renewal of the U.S.-Japan Security Treaty, which was set to expire in 1970, other sections of Japanese society loudly displayed their displeasure with the “imperial” United States, incensed especially by the Vietnam War, visits by nuclear-powered warships to Japanese ports, and continued U.S. control over Okinawa. Violent protests in Sasebo and other cities, spearheaded by the JCP, JSP, labor unions, and student groups, introduced a troubling new dimension to Japanese political culture.

The United States, meanwhile, did what it could to palliate Japanese criticism, for example, by closing or relocating military bases and fretting over the visits of nuclear-powered ships. By far the most explosive issue was the question of the reversion of Okinawa (and the rest of the Ryukyu Islands) to Japanese control, a topic that takes center stage in Reels 15–18. As the documents reveal, Japan and the United States engaged in serious negotiations concerning all aspects of the reversion, particularly the financial, economic, and military dimensions. The negotiations lasted throughout this period, bolstered by Sato’s visits to Washington in 1967 and 1969 to meet with Presidents Lyndon Baines Johnson and Richard M. Nixon. Although both meetings covered a wide range of issues, the most important topic in the subsequent joint communiqués was the fate of Okinawa. In essence, the Okinawa reversion and the impending renewal of the U.S.-Japan Security Treaty became tightly entwined: handing Okinawa back to the Japanese became an essential (though unspoken) precondition to renewal of the treaty—not because they were seen as quid pro quo but rather because Okinawa was a major source of anti-U.S. sentiment, and renewing the Treaty while Okinawa was under U.S. control would have been fraught with political danger. As it turned out, the agreement reached in November 1969 between Sato and President Nixon held, and Okinawa returned to Japanese control in 1972.

Privately some U.S. officials fumed at what they saw as Japanese ingratitude. Writing in February 1968, Secretary of State Dean Rusk vehemently opposed Japanese demands for the reversion of Okinawa, pointing out that “we have some six hundred thousand men in uniform in the Far Pacific engaged in security tasks which are of vital concern to the future security of Japan. We have taken over a quarter of a million casualties since 1945—most of them in the Far East with Japan as a major beneficiary.” Pointing out that the United States was “in a deadly struggle in Viet-Nam,” he concluded that “if the Okinawa base is needed in the course of that struggle we should use it” and that “Japan should be glad to see us use it.” Disgusted, he added that it was “almost more than the flesh and spirit can bear to have Japan whining about Okinawa while we are losing several hundred killed each month in behalf of our common security in the Pacific” (Reel 12, Frames 0158–0159). U. Alexis Johnson, U.S. ambassador to Japan, concurred, writing that “I feel that the stakes for us in Vietnam and Korea are so high and so urgent that we should no longer hold back our punches” in the hopes that “we will be able to nurture the Japanese to the point that they will be able to better stand with us in some future crisis. Frankly,” he argued, “I feel that the crisis is here and that we should have no hesitancy in seeking to ‘cash some of the checks’ against the long line of deposits that we have made to the Japanese” (Reel 12, Frame 0760). He summed up his analysis with words that echo in today's debate over the Iraq War: "as long as they feel they can get away without taking stands on the tough issues and as long as they feel that we will supinely acquiesce in their doing so," he pointed out, "they will, of course, choose the course which at the moment seems to them to be the easiest. All I am saying," he emphasized, "is that I feel we should make them face up to some choices" (Reel 12, Frame 0760). Although Rusk and Johnson were ultimately overruled, the United States was able to maintain its strong military presence in Okinawa even after the reversion of the Ryukyu Islands to Japanese sovereignty.

This collection offers a valuable glimpse at a fascinating period in postwar Japanese history, a time when accelerating economic and political strength made possible a loosening of the military bonds with the United States. Although there is considerable material on political and cultural developments, the main focus rests squarely on U.S.-Japan relations, particularly the debate over the Okinawa reversion. It is hardly surprising that the State Department was almost completely absorbed by issues involving the U.S. military presence in eastern and southeast Asia. In the three decades after 1945, after all, Japan's value lay almost exclusively in its role as a military staging point for the ongoing struggle against communism.

SOURCE NOTE

LexisNexis microfilmed this collection from the holdings of the National Archives, College Park, Maryland, Record Group 59: Records of the Department of State, Central Foreign Policy Files, Subject-Numeric Files, 1967–1969, for Japan. Materials from the following Subject-Numeric File categories were included in this microfilm publication: Economic (selected), and Political and Defense. Specific subject categories include AID (Foreign Aid) from the Economic Subject-Numeric File category; and CSM (Communism), DEF (Defense), and POL (Political Affairs and Relations) from the Political and Defense Subject-Numeric File Category.

EDITORIAL NOTE

The Subject-Numeric Files for February 1963 through July 1973 are arranged by subject-numeric categories, not by country. Therefore, some file folders will contain multiple subject categories. In addition, some folders will have more than one country represented by a single subject category.

LexisNexis has microfilmed all available documents relating to the subject categories listed above for Japan. In addition to the documents, LexisNexis has filmed file folders when possible. LexisNexis has excluded from microfilming only exact duplicate copies of documents. LexisNexis has microfilmed the documents as they are arranged at the National Archives. In a small number of instances, some documents have been misfiled and/or misclassified by the National Archives and/or State Department. LexisNexis has included, in brackets, corrected citations for these items. A few Document Withdrawal Sheets exist in the files, and LexisNexis has filmed them. Withdrawal Sheets itemize documents that have been withdrawn from the files, due to national security restrictions, by the National Archives staff.

STATE DEPARTMENT RECORDS CLASSIFICATION SYSTEM, FEBRUARY 1963–JULY 1973

Essential to the effective administration of the State Department and its overseas posts is the management of records. In keeping with the State Department's program to improve and modernize its administrative processes, the department developed a new comprehensive records classification system in February–March 1963 (used until July 1973).

This new uniform file system enabled users to file and find material rapidly—the usefulness of recorded information being largely dependent upon the logical arrangement of records. The new system applied to both official and working files.

The new system was based on several years of research and embodied many substantial contributions made by departmental and overseas personnel. An effort had been made to provide sufficient flexibility and subject matter coverage to meet the needs of offices and posts both large and small.

A. PURPOSE AND SCOPE

The new Records Classification System embodied a uniform official file system to be used throughout the department and its overseas posts. It was intended for use by operating offices as well as by departmental and post central files operations. The new system did not apply to certain types of case files, however, such as official personnel files, security investigative files, voucher files, and so forth. Offices continued to maintain chronological files where necessary or desirable.

B. ARRANGEMENT AND CONTENT

1. Subject File Outlines

The attached file outlines (which can be found immediately following this description of the classification system) compose the new file system. They were arranged within seven broad subject matter areas (known earlier as classes), with each area including specific subdivisions of related secondary and tertiary code symbols.

2. Special Instructions

a. International Organizations and Conferences

This system provided a special method for handling records accumulated in large quantities by offices that were primarily interested in a specific organization or conference rather than in the subject matter with which it dealt. Use of this special feature of the new file system afforded such offices a method for organizing this type of record material to meet their own reference needs within the framework of the new system. It proved of particular use to the Bureau of International Organization Affairs and to United States Missions to international organizations, such as the U.S. United Nations Delegation.

b. Commercial Officers

This instruction to the system was prepared in cooperation with the Department of Commerce for the special guidance of commercial officers in their use of the new file system. It provided for pre-coding of commercial-economic reports with the appropriate subject matter code symbols.

c. Peace Corps Representatives

This instruction to the system was prepared in cooperation with the Peace Corps for the guidance of its field representatives in records organization and maintenance. It prescribed the use of the appropriate administrative subject outlines for Peace Corps records administration.

d. U.S. Information Service (USIS)

Special subject designations were developed in cooperation with the U.S. Information Agency for use by those posts at which USIS files were maintained by the post's Central Records Unit. These designations were included in the Culture & Information subject outline.

C. TYPE OF SYSTEM

1. Subject-Numeric System

The new uniform file system was of the subject-numeric type. It was selected because of the flexibility that it provided for expansion purposes and the simplicity of file designations for marking purposes. A mnemonic symbol was selected for each of the fifty-five primary subjects for which file outlines had been developed. These symbols ranged from one to four letters in length and had been chosen because of their meaning or obvious relationship to the subject matter for which they stood. In some cases the symbol was identical with an office symbol (e.g., PPT for Passports & Citizenship, AV for Aviation (Civil)). In other cases the key letters in the primary subject constituted the symbol (e.g., CON for Consular Affairs (General), REF for Refugees & Migration, AGR for Agriculture (General)).

While many small offices used the primary subjects alone, larger offices required further breakdowns of the primary subjects for more detailed subject matter coverage.

Simple serial numbers were assigned to subject breakdowns at both the secondary and tertiary level. For example, a paper relating to the subject of agricultural production in general was classified AGR 12; a paper dealing with technological advances in agricultural production was AGR 12-1. The most detailed subdivision contained no more than four digits, making for a relatively simple file designation. Sample Reel Index entries with Subject-Numeric Codes are included with this introductory matter.

2. Use of Identical Numbers for Similar Subjects

As an additional aid, the same number was assigned to similar secondary and tertiary subjects appearing in different subject file outlines. In most outlines the first five secondary subjects were standard (e.g., General Policy, Plans, and Programs; General Reports and Statistics; Organizations and Conferences; Agreements and Treaties; and Laws and Regulations). This same principle was applied to other similar or related subjects (e.g., Communist Bloc activities in aid, trade, and educational and cultural fields were assigned a “6” number—AID 6, FT 6, EDU 6, respectively; production and consumption was assigned a “12” number in the various industry outlines—AGR 12, INCO 12, PET 12).

3. Expansion of Existing Subjects

While no attempt was made to provide breakdowns for subject matter beyond the tertiary level, there were cases in which an office might want or need to subdivide a secondary or tertiary subject alphabetically by name, geographic location, or other appropriate breakdown. For example, papers relating to visits by foreign dignitaries were subdivided by name (e.g., POL 7 Visits—Adenauer); papers relating to a trade fair by location (e.g., TP 8 Fairs—Moscow); or papers relating to a thermal power project by type (e.g., FSE 12 Electric Power—Thermal).

D. SPECIAL FEATURES

1. Flexibility

Flexibility was an important feature of the uniform file system. The new system embodied an unusual amount of flexibility by providing users with several methods of arranging material according to their specific requirements. Three important areas of choice are indicated below:

a. Subject vs. Geographic Arrangement

Within each subject file outline, where appropriate, alternative ways of arranging material by subject or area/country were possible. An office interested only in a specific subject without regard to country selected the method of arrangement described above. An office that was primarily interested in specific subject matter but with a secondary concern for a geographic area or country selected the method described in Instruction "C" (Type of System). A geographic bureau or other office primarily concerned with a specific country used the method of arranging first by country and there under by subject described in Instruction "B" (Arrangement and Content).

b. Treatment of International Organizations and Conferences

Most offices accumulated a varying amount of material on international organizations and conferences in which the U.S. government was represented or participated. The interests of each office and its responsibility for international organization and conference activities determined the amount of record material that it accumulated and the method by which it arranged material to meet user needs.

An office that had a limited interest in such organizations and conferences and accumulated a relatively small quantity of papers probably found the "3" (Organizations and Conferences) classification within the appropriate subject outline adequate. An office that had a major interest in and responsibility for an organization such as the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO), the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD), or the World Health Organization (WHO), however, adopted the method of arrangement described in Instruction "D" (Special Features). Under this arrangement a special subject file by title of organization was set up under the appropriate subject outline, using any of the secondary or tertiary breakdowns as necessary.

The Bureau of International Organization Affairs, special missions to international organizations, and other offices that accumulated a large volume of material on a specific organization or conference used the special instruction method of arrangement. This instruction contained a standard list of administrative subjects common to international organizations and conferences. It also provided a unique method of arranging substantive program material relating to the specific organization or conference by selecting appropriate subjects, permitting an organizational approach within the framework of a uniform subject system.

c. Treatment of Industries and Commodities

Because of the importance of the commercial-economic reporting program, special attention was given to the treatment of industries and commodities under the new file system. Specific subject outlines were developed for the most significant industries, such as Agriculture (General), Fuels & Energy, Petroleum, Telecommunications, and Transportation. With the exception of Agriculture (General), these industry outlines covered the related commodities and products as well.

To take care of the large number of other industries, commodities, products, and specific agricultural crops, an alphabetical guide was developed as an adjunct to the Industries & Commodities (General) outline. This list, referred to as INCO (specific), provided offices with a simple method of filing materials on specific commodities, regardless of whether they were in their natural or manufactured state.

Instructions preceding the alphabetical listing offered users a choice of methods of arrangement within the list. For example, one office may have preferred to group all minerals and metals together while another office may have found it preferable to file by the specific mineral or metal.

2. Detailed Instructions (Miscellaneous)

In addition to the instructions above, alternative methods of arrangement, detailed statements, or explanations of the coverage of specific secondary and tertiary breakdowns of the primary subject were provided on an ad hoc basis. Specific cross-references to related subject matter within the same or in other outlines were also indicated. Classifiers found these instructions useful in determining proper file designations, particularly in the case of subject matter that may not have been familiar to them.

3. Country Symbols

A list of standard country abbreviations, used for coding papers relating to specific countries, is contained in this guide.

SAMPLE REEL INDEX ENTRIES

Entries in the Reel Index refer to specific documents within a Confidential U.S. State Department Central Files collection. The documents are arranged by the Subject File Outlines noted in the “State Department Records Classification System, February 1963–July 1973,” contained in this guide. In order to improve access to some subject categories, LexisNexis has included selected “major topics” (enclosed in brackets) on the line below the subject description. In addition, for categories that are over one hundred pages, LexisNexis has subdivided these groups by month and year.

The four-digit number on the far left represents the frame number at which a particular Subject-Numeric Classification begins. This is followed the Subject-Numeric symbol, a country code, and an explanation of the Subject-Numeric Classification. The samples below provide a description of the arrangement of the information in a representative State Department Central Files guide.

REEL INDEX

Entries in this index refer to specific documents within Confidential U.S. State Department Central Files, Japan, 1967–1969, Part 1: Political, Governmental, and National Defense Affairs. These documents are arranged by the Subject File Outlines noted in the “State Department Records Classification System, February 1963–July 1973,” contained in the introductory matter to this guide. See also the Sample Reel Index Entries for a description of the arrangement of the information in this guide. For some subjects, the guide writer has included additional topics (enclosed in brackets) following the subject description. In addition, for those subjects numbering more than one hundred pages, the guide writer has subdivided these groupings chronologically by month and year.

LexisNexis has filmed these documents as they are filed at the National Archives. In some instances, there are documents that appear to have been misclassified by the Department of State. LexisNexis has retained the original subject-numeric symbol and, within brackets, enclosed a different subject-numeric symbol and its accompanying subject citation.

Many reel index entries include country abbreviations. A Country Abbreviations list can be found in the introductory matter to this guide.

The four-digit number on the far left represents the frame number at which a particular subject-numeric classification begins.

SUBJECT INDEX

The following index is a guide to the major topics, personalities, and activities in this microform publication. The first number after each entry or subentry refers to the reel, while the four-digit number following the colon refers to the frame number at which a particular file folder containing information on the subject begins. Hence, 11: 0340 directs the researcher to the folder that begins at frame 0340 of Reel 11. By referring to the Reel Index, which constitutes the initial section of this guide, researchers will find a document list including folder titles and major topics in the order in which they appear in the film.

Japan's resurrection following World War II is one of the greatest stories of the twentieth century. After a brief period under U.S. occupation and armed with a new pacifist constitution, Japan embarked in the 1950s on a phenomenal period of economic growth that lasted nearly four decades. This collection, which covers the period 1967–1969, witnesses a Japan flush with economic and political power but still chafing under the military dominance of the United States.

While the Liberal Democratic Party strongly favored a renewal of the U.S.-Japan Security Treaty, which was set to expire in 1970, other sections of Japanese society loudly displayed their displeasure with the “imperial” United States, incensed especially by the Vietnam War, visits by nuclear-powered warships to Japanese ports, and continued U.S. control over Okinawa.

Okinawa and the rest of the Ryukyu Islands were a topic of heated debate, as these documents show. The Japanese continued to pressure the United States to cede control of these islands back to Japan. But some in the U.S. government disliked the idea very much, especially considering the islands' possible strategic importance during the prosecution of the Vietnam War.

This collection of the Confidential State Department Central Files for Japan, 1967–69, provides a unique and candid perspective on the rise of Japan from the ashes of defeat to the heights of economic and political power. It also opens a window on a formative time in the ongoing relationship between the United States and a democratic Japan.
